BURNED AND MAIMED.

The Boilers in a Pittsburgh Iron Mill Let Go.

PITTSBURGH, PA., October 2.—A battery f boilers in Clarke's Solar Iron Works, at Thirty-sixth and Smallman streets, exploded at 3:05 o'clock this morning, with disastrous effects. Seventeen persons were dangerously scalded, three of them known to be fatally burned, and some of the others when the explosion occurred. Those who were fatally hurt were taken to their homes, while others were taken to the various hospitals. A slight re-port followed the explosion, and a vast wd congregated at the mill. Dust and crowd congregated at the mill. Dust and dirt so disfigured the injured men that much difficulty was experienced in identifying them. The greatest confusion existed. Men, women and children rushed frantically about, and the moans of the injured mingled with the shouts of the frightened gathering. The Mayor's office was promptly notified, and physicians and policemen were hurried to the mill. The scenes at the mill after the explosion were heartrending. One by one the victims were carried out, covered with ashes and bruised and bleeding from their wounds. The accident was caused by a rupture of the mud drum. No theory has yet been offered, which would account for the sad catastrophe. The injured were found lying in all positions. Some of them were so far away from the battery of the boilers that it seemed impossible that they could have been injured by the explosion. The large number of boys hurt is accounted for by the fact that they were employed to handle the hoop iron, which was rolled on the mill nearest the boilers. A panic occurred among the workmen, and there was a general stampede for the doors. A number were hurt in this way, being crushed upon in their efforts to escape. The mill is badly damaged. The loss cannot be estimated at present. dirt so disfigured the injured men that

The result was that Mr. Longwell threw up two snakes, one about fourteen inches long and the other a foot in length, brown in color and both alive, and they are alive yet. Mr. Longwell was so overjoyed at his deliverance that he could not forbear bringing the stomachic monsters to town and exhibiting them to a few of his friends. The story is vouched for by several who were about the house at the time, and the physician expresses his belief in the inciwere about the house at the time, and the physician expresses his belief in the incident. Longwell is a young farmer and a man of veracity. Mr. Longwell thinks that he swallowed the eggs which produced the sunkes while carelessly drinking water from a spring.

PORTAGE, N. Y., September 30 .- Fully urithousand persons, coming from Buffalo, Rochester, Elmira and other places along the line of the Erie Railroad, were on the banks of the Portage Gorge, this afternoon, to see Prof. J. E. De Leon, of Springfield, O., risk his life by walking a tight-rope stretched 350 feet from side to side, at a distance of 200 feet above the rocky bed of the river, and directly above the falls. The rope was an inch in diameter, much smaller than is generally used in such feats. The performer walked across in eight minutes, and returned to the center of the chasm, where he gave a trapeze performance, after which he lowered himself to the river, landing on the stonework which was recently built to keep the falls from washing away. He was thoroughly exhausted, and after a rest climbed the stairs to Murphy's Park and marched triumphantly back to his hotel with a brass band in front of him. the line of the Erie Railroad, were on the

A Building Collapses.

Chicago, September 30.—A four-story brick building in the rear of Nos. 196 and 198 South Clark street, collapsed at 2:30 o'clock this morning. The basement of the wrecked structure was used as the working part of a bakery, and several employes were engaged there just prior to the fall. They, however, were warned by the cracking walls and rafters and left the scene of danger only a few minutes before the roof fell in with a crash, and cornice and all the floors down to the first story. The rear wall also tell out, destroying several old sheds that stood adjacent. The loss is estimated at $50,000, as the contents of the building were very valuable, there being $10,090 worth of desiccated eggs alone in one part. The second floor was stored with flour; on the third there was a large machine shop with a valuable plant, and the fourth floor was devoted to the manufacture of printing rollers. It was reported that several men were missing, and the firemen have since been clearing away the debris to ascertain if any unfortunates are buried there fortunately, that no one had been injured. SOCIETY SENSATION. TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

How Arthur Pruyne Was Jilted by His Affianced on Eve of Marriage. NEW HAVEN, CONN., September 30.—Not for years has New Haven society been agitated to such a degree as by the desertion by Miss Honorai Harwood, younges daughter of the Rev. N. Y., on the eve of their wedding, following up by eloping with and marrying Thurman Heminway, also arich young man, and a resident of New York City, and fleeing with him to Europe. The Fruyne wedding was to have been a most brilliant affair, and was to have taken place at Trinity on the 6th of October, Dr. Harwood officiating. It was announced in this morning's paper, and in to-night's is the story of the elopement, together with the announcement of the marriage of the young couple by Rev. Frederick E. Mortimer, of St. Mark's Church, in Jersey City yesterday, and of their sailling on the steamer Werra for Bremen last night. The bride sent copies of her marriage certificate to her aged parents and to her affianced. The former are prostrated with grief and shame. Invitations had been sent out by the hundred to the wedding; presents had been completed—trimmed with rare old lace from the bridal dress of the groom's mother, and Mr. Pruyne had also presented his affianced with a set of elegant diamonds. The heroine of this romantic episode has been a popular leader in society here, a prominent figure at the Yale College germans, and a favorite. She is a lovely demiblonde of twenty-two, prepossessing and polished, and of robust figure. While at Mount Desert a year ago last summer both the young men mentioned became suitors Mount Desert a year ago last summer both the young men mentioned became suitors for her hand. but the match was broken up by Dr. Harwood, who objected to the young man on account of his habits. The Harwood family then went to Europe, whence they have just returned. Pruyne followed them over the water and renewed his suit with an ardor that finally turned Dr. Harwood in his favor, and he at last gave his consent. The tourists came home late in August. During all the preparation for the wedding, however, Miss Honorai seemed down-hearted. Last week she went to New York, ostensihly to finish her trousseau. She met Mr. Heminway, who, it seems, was her heart's love all the time. He has recently fallen heir to some $300,000. He pressed his suit ardently, and the elopement, marriage and flight ensued. It is now said that the pair have been in correspondence ever since the gay summer at Mount Description.

MIDNIGHT EXECUTION.

Wretched Man, Hartnet, Almost Be COLUMBUS, O., September 30 .- 2 A. M.

ate a hearty supper and retired at 10 o'clock to await the hour of execution. At 1:15 assembled in the Clerk's office, put on slip pers, and, with lanterns, the party, headed by the Warden, proceeded to Hartnet' cell. It had been previously arranged that Beresford should pull the lever, Long adjust the rope, Kelly strap the prisoner, and Moses put the handcuffs on him. The Sheriffs were Baker, of Clarke; Arnold, of Seneca, and White, of Delaware. Hartnet was to say, and 1:22 the drop fell, and an awful scene was presented. The fall was too great, and Harnet's head was nearly torn from his body. The blood spurted over those near by, and in less than two minutes he was pronounced dead. Hartnet was at once cut down, as it was feared that the head would be torn clear from the body if permitted to remain long. The scaffold was slippery with the blood, and those in attendance were not long in getting out. all looking were not long in getting out, all looking pale and some were sick. It was pro-nounced by all to have been a very sicken-ing affair.

The Pennsylvania Aerolite.

CLAYSVILLE, PA., October 1 .- The aer

lite, or meteoric stone, which is supposed to have caused the loud detonations heard throughout the greater part of Washing ton and Allegheny Counties on Saturday last, fell upon the farm of Mr. Buckland, in Jefferson Township, near the West Virginia line, instead of Cecil, as reported in some papers. Ellis Jones, who carries the mail north of this place, witnessed the fiery creature in its flight through the heavens. He said he never heheld a more awful or impressive scene. His horse suddenly stopped, and he heard a noise as if the winds were rushing onward with great violence. Looking up he saw moving high above him with incredible velocity a huge which causes war, pestilence and famine pervaded the flery visitor. A great num-ber of people have gone to see the wonder. Measures should have been taken early to preserve the stone intact. Up to this time he relic hunters have done remarkably well in carrying away souvenirs. WASHINGTON, October 1.—A delegation of ministers has waited upon the Postmaster-General to protest against the de-livery of special rate letters in any of the cities entitled to them on Sunday.

The cars which had broken loose increased their speed as they approached the second or cage section, and probably had ran a mile before they struck it. The engineer of the rear section saw the cars approaching, but only had time to stop his train before it struck him. The brakemen on the loose cars tried to put on brakes, but they had difficulty in running from car to car on account of the wagons, which impeded their progress. Had the engineer of the rear section had a moment more time he could have backed his train and avoided the calamity. But it was too late, and the cars struck his engine with tremendous force, throwing three sleepers from the track and smashing them beyond recognition. The result was soon apparent. More than a hundred men were buried in the debris. The scene can hardly be described. The night was fearfully dark, and the greens of the men were appalling. The people in the rear section began the work of renoving the victims, five of whom were found dead, and many others wounded and Needing. Word was at once dispatched to the city, and a train in charge of Superintendent Vining at once hastened to the scene, and the dead and wounded were brought here. The work of removing the men from the debris was a sorry task. A man alive and uninjured was taken from between two dead ones, and it was simply a miracle that he escaped. Wilson, the watchman, saw that the accident was inevitable, and he could have saved his life by jumping, but he refused to desert his comrades, and lost his life while trying to arouse the sleeping men. Wilson was torn to pieces, and his mangled remains were strewn along the track for some distance. His heart was found on top of a car.
